Income Guidelines

The following maximum income levels, which are based on 125% of the latest revisions of the Federal Poverty Guidelines determined by the Department of Health and Human Services and approved by the Legal Services Corporation, should be used to determine client eligibility effective January 11, 2019. The guidelines are based on gross income.

Size of Family	2019
	Yearly Income
1	$12,490
2	$16,910
3	$21,330
4	$25,750
5	$30,170
6	$34,590
7	$39,010
8	$43,430

For family units with more than 8 members, add $4,420/year for each additional member in the family. These guidelines are based on gross income.

Type of help

There are several ways in which a legal organization can provide help:

- Full representation - representation by a lawyer or a legal advocate in court or at a hearing.
- Brief advice - quick advice in person or over the telephone.
- Legal clinics - clinics offered to help individuals seeking legal information about particular issues, for example uncontested divorce.
- Self-help materials - online resources, or print resources including flyers or brochures available to individuals to help them gain better understanding of their rights and the legal process.

Income exceptions

An organization may also list instances in which it can assist a person whose income is higher than the income guidelines. For example, an organization may make exceptions for seniors, people experiencing domestic violence, or people who are facing an eviction. Some organizations determine income eligibility by taking expenses such as child care, medical bills, and debts into account.

Towards Justice Defending the Dignity of Work

1410 High Street, Suite 300, Denver, CO 80218

P: 720-441-2236

E: info@towardsjustice.org

www.towardsjustice.org

Towards Justice is a non-profit legal services organization focused on representing low-wage, mostly immigrant workers who have been victims of wage theft. Wage theft is a huge, underreported, and under-policed problem. The Colorado Fiscal Institute estimates that $750 million in earned wages are stolen from Colorado workers annually, and the U.S. Wage and Hour Administrator admitted that the U.S. Department of Labor “can never be in enough places to enforce the law on our own.” We need organizations like Towards Justice to make worker protections meaningful in real life.

In its first year, Towards Justice conducted over 270 legal intake interviews, directly represented more than 140 workers in wage theft cases, and recovered approximately $120,000 for exploited workers. Workers used this money to put food on their tables, stabilize their housing situations, and pay off their debts. For the population served, even small recoveries can be the difference between eviction and stability, dinner at home and dinner at a soup kitchen, or transportation and losing a job. Towards Justice also serves as a clearinghouse; helping wage theft victims to identify the most appropriate way to seek redress. Towards Justice helps workers to determine whether their claim falls within the jurisdiction of Colorado Department of Labor and Employment or the US Department of Labor, or connects workers with private or pro bono attorneys in the Towards Justice collaborating attorneys’ network. Potential clients can contact Towards Justice at (720) 441-2236.
